

P1-2 Participating Hospitals in Australia and New Zealand

PVC
RECYCLING
IN HOSPITALS

News

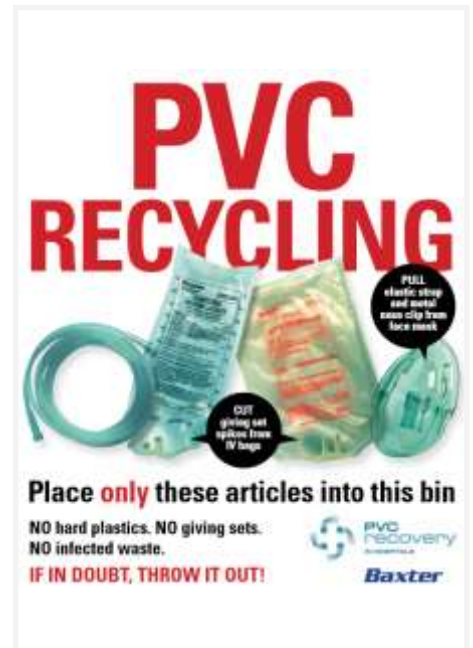

PVC Recycling in Hospitals continues to grow with now over 90 hospitals in Australia/New Zealand. This Australian innovation is gaining awards in Australia and overseas. One day it will be normal practice.

Congratulations to these hospitals who are recycling their PVC and setting a great example to their communities. Some have recently started by recycling in one ward. Others have now integrated PVC recycling across all practical areas and have achieved minimal contamination. For them it is now part of good practice.

We can now also list training organisations that are including PVC recycling in course delivery, and welcome our first Veterinary Hospital—in Mildura, Victoria.

To help facilitate the change over to recycling we provide free videos and newsletters (click here) and we welcome questions, data and offers of assistance.

1st April 2017

The PVC Recycling program is part of the Vinyl Council Australia's product stewardship program with members. As a not-for-profit professional industry association, the VCA appreciates the word-of-mouth and 'seeing is believing' network that brings more hospitals to the program. This partially explains the different rates of participation, as well as the fact that collections started in WA and Qld in late 2016 and will commence in South Australia as hospital registrations of interest grow.

Thanks to all who recycle in hospitals.
Great work.

A special thanks to our wonderful partners in our suppliers, reproducers and collectors, in particular VCA members Baxter Healthcare and Welvic Australia.

Recycling would be impossible without all participants working together to ensure this material goes to a better place than landfill.
