

Participating Hospitals in Australia and New Zealand

PVC Recycling in Hospitals — an initiative of the Vinyl Council of Australia — continues to grow and gain recognition. There are now over 150 public and private hospitals and VETs participating in Australia/New Zealand. One day, recycling will be normal practice.

Congratulations to those hospitals who are recycling their PVC medical products, and setting a great example to their colleagues. All start by recycling in one unit, and then grow, integrating PVC recycling into high-volume areas as they adopt good separation habits with minimal contamination in their bins. For them it is now part of good practice. To help facilitate the change from wasting to recycling we provide free videos and newsletters (click here).

Each week the quantity recycled grows as more hospitals join in and we send your quality material to manufacturers in Australia/NZ who make it into new product and give your PVC a new and long life.

If your healthcare facility is not yet recycling its PVC medical products—IV bags, oxygen masks and tubes— find out more about our product stewardship program at www.vinyl.org.au/pvc-recycling-in-hospital.

PVC RECYCLING

CUT giving set splices from IV bags

PULL elastic strap and metal nose clip from face mask

Place only these articles into this bin

NO hard plastics. NO giving sets. NO infected waste.

IF IN DOUBT, THROW IT OUT!

The PVC Recycling in Hospitals program is part of the Vinyl Council of Australia's stewardship program with members. As a not-for-profit industry association working to advance the sustainability of the PVC industry, the Vinyl Council is proud of the shared effort of its member companies working with staff in the healthcare sector to divert quality material from landfill.

This world-leading program started in partnership with Western Health in Melbourne and has grown across Australia/NZ.

A special thanks to our program partners: the suppliers, reprocessors and collectors, especially our members Baxter Healthcare and Welvic Australia.
